Miss Mamie Reinhart and J. Fred Reinhart visited Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Estleman of Ann Arbor Sunday.

At the Methodist church last evening an expression was called for from those present at the prayer meeting touching the return of Dr. Allen for another year. When a rising vote of those in favor of his return was called for the large audience rose en masse, while Dr. Allen, to whom the action was a complete surprise, was scarcely able to control his emotions as he feelingly thanked the brethren and sisters for their love and loyalty. After the meeting closed the quarterly conference met and unanimously passed resolutions inviting Dr. Allen to remain their pastor, and requested the presiding elder to use all legitimate influences to prevent any change in their pastoral relations. Dr. Allen is greatly beloved by his church, and it would be a sore affliction to have him taken from them.

What a Boy Can Do.
A boy can make the world more pure
By kindly word and deed;
As blossoms call for nature's light,
So hearts love's sunshine need.

A boy can make the world more pure
By lips kept ever clean;
Silence can influence shed as sure
As speech oft more doth mean.

A boy can make the world more true
By an exalted aim;
Let one give and pursue
Others will seek the same.

Full simple things indeed, these three,
Thus stated in my rhyme;
Yet what, dear lad, could greater be—
What grander, more sublime?

The Glass Diving Bell.
Let us suppose that your teacher of physics offers a prize to the member of the class who will show how a lump of sugar may be put under water without its getting wet. That seems to be a somewhat difficult problem, doesn't it? But it may easily be solved, and here is the way.

You know that if you put an empty glass tumbler down into a basin of water, the water will not rise in the tumbler so high as it is in the basin, because the air in the tumbler prevents it. Now that knowledge will help you to solve the teacher's problem.

Get your mother to lend you a glass cheese cover and a wide-mouthed glass jar; say, an empty pickle jar. Stand the cheese cover upside down on the mouth of the jar, the knob of the cover going inside the jar; it will thus stand firm.

Now pour the cheese cover two-thirds full of water, and on the water lay a round, flat cork of smaller diameter than the inside of the glass tumbler. Place a lump of sugar on the cork, and then very carefully put the tumbler mouth over the cork, holding the tumbler perfectly straight up and down, so as not to overturn the cork.

Press the tumbler down into the water slowly and gently, and you may finally let the rim rest on the bottom of the cheese cover, with the cork floating on the surface of the water in the tumbler. The lump of sugar thus lies on the cork above the water, and yet it is really below the level of the water in the cheese cover.

Before performing this feat in public it would be well to test the depth of the water in the cover. Two-thirds may be a little too much to pour in. What you want to be sure of is that there will be space enough above the Water, But Not Wet.

Sugar in the tumbler for the cork to float free, with the sugar not quite touching the glass at the top. This may be determined by experiment.

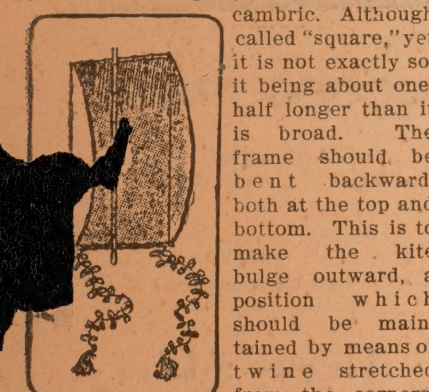

Reptiles That Walk Erect.
Lizards of several sorts can walk and run easily on their hind legs. The Australian water lizard, which is three or four feet in length, keeps quite erect when traversing long distances on land. It is found in the neighborhood of river banks and passes much of its time in shallow water, says Pearson's Weekly.

The frilled lizard of Queensland also travels on its hind legs on level ground, keeping the frill folded while running. When attacked it expands this fold of skin, which stands out like a ruff at right angles round the neck, giving it a most formidable aspect, so that dogs that attack and kill larger lizards will often retreat before a frilled lizard at bay.

There is also a tree lizard in Australia that moves in a similar way. All these species walk on all fours when merely moving about or going on short distances.

To Make a Square Kite.
One of the easiest to make, perhaps, is the square kite. The frame is composed of split bamboo, and should be covered with tightly stretched Scotch cambric. Although called "square," yet it is not exactly so, it being about one-half longer than it is broad.

The frame should be bent backward both at the top and bottom. This is to make the kite bulge outward, a position which should be maintained by means of twine stretched from the corners.

both above and below. The breast-band should be attached in the usual manner, and the completed kite should have two tails instead of one, one at each lower corner.

Two Curious Tricks.
To light a candle without touching the wick, let a candle burn until it has a good long snuff, then blow it out with a sudden puff. A bright wreath of white smoke will curl up from the hot wick; now, if a flame is applied to this smoke, even at a distance of two or three inches from the candle, the flame will run down the smoke and kindle the wick. Don't have any draft or banging doors.

The Magic Eggs.—Take some water and dissolve in it as much common salt as it will take up; with this brine half fill a glass; then fill up with plain water. Lay down the side of a spoon to break its fall. Put an egg into another glass of common water it will sink to the bottom, but if it is put into the glass containing the brine it will sink through the plain water only and float upon that portion which is saturated with salt.

A Four-Footed Mail-Carrier.
A Kansas town boasts of a New foundland dog intelligent enough to be a mail-carrier. The station is only a short distance from the postoffice. The mail trains do not stop, but drop the bags on the platform in passing. When the dog hears the whistle of the approaching train he hurries to the station and waits for his burden. The mail clerk kicks the mail-bag out of the car door and it falls somewhere in the vicinity of the freight house. The dog goes at once to the sack, and taking it carefully by the middle, so that neither end will drag on the ground, walks sedately to the post-office, where he deposits his trust in a safe place.

The dog is now five years old, is two feet seven inches in height, and strong of limb. So he has no difficulty in carrying the sack, although the mail is often very heavy with the weekly papers from the county seat, for his teeth are strong. He has carried over forty-eight pounds as a test of his strength.

The Dog and Adjective Game.

This is a very simple game, but it may readily be made a very helpful one to those who desire—as who does not?—to increase their knowledge of words. It may be played without preparation, and will be played in that way perhaps, as a rule; but to make it give the best service in a teaching way, arrange if convenient, so that the players may know of it a day or so in advance. In that case they may have a chance to look over their text books, or the dictionary, to become familiar with as many adjectives as possible.

The players seat themselves in two rows, facing each other, and the first player on one side begins by saying: "Our dear little dog is active."

Then the player opposite to him must take up the phrase, and before the first player can count ten must substitute some other adjective, beginning with "a" for "active"; thus, "our dear little dog is amiable." If he fails he drops out of the game; but if he gives a correct answer, he then counts ten while the second player on the other side is getting an answer ready.

Thus the phrase passes from one side to the other, until all the players on one side are out.

The game may be continued for some time if desired, by using adjectives beginning with the other letters of the alphabet.

Conundrums.

When does a ship tell a falsehood? When she lies at the wharf.

What is the best way to keep loafers from standing on the corners? Give them chairs and let them sit down.

Who first brought gambling into the world? Adam and Eve, when they left the garden of Eden they left a paradise (pair of dice) behind them.

Why are pipes humbungs? Because they're merehumbs.

What paper has the largest circulation in the world? A paper of tobacco.

Why is a watermelon full of water? Because it was planted in the spring.

Why is "E" an unfortunate letter? Because it's the beginning of eternity.

IN BUTTERFLY-LAND

Life history.—1. Caterpillar. 2. Chrysalis. 3. Butterfly.

Directions for coloring:
The body is black, the antennae, or feelers, brown. The large open spaces on the wings are reddish orange, the rest of the wings, the veins and borders, are black, except the small round dots on the margins, which are white.

The milkweed butterfly takes its name from the fact that it lays its eggs on the milkweed plant; and, as a caterpillar baby, feeds upon its milky leaves. Its gay Princeton colors of orange and black, with fashionable white polka dot trimmings, make it a conspicuous bit of brightness as it flits slowly over summer fields, and probably earn for it the second name by which it is known—Moiarch.

His majesty belongs to a family of curious butterflies that are called the end of time and space, the beginning of every end and the end of every race.

Why should young ladies never wear stays? Because it's horrid to see a girl tight.

If you were riding on a donkey what fruit would you resemble? A beautiful pear (pair).

How did the whale that swallowed Jonah obey the divine law? Jonah was a stranger and he took him in.

Grandfather's Necklace.

This is a trick of classic origin, as it was performed long ago by Greek jugglers. Either large beads or rings may be used in its performance.

Prepare beforehand by getting two ribbons exactly alike and the same length; double each so the ends come together; tie the ribbons at the folds with a thread exactly the same color.

Slip on the rings and give two of the spectators the ends to hold. They will believe that each is holding the ends of the two different ribbons. Have them hold the ribbons loosely, and then ask each of them for the ends they hold and exchange with them the ends they before held.

Take hold of one of the rings at the center, dexterously break the thread that holds the ribbons and slip off the rings.

Festivals of the Dolls.

Japanese girls have a pretty custom in the Festival of the Dolls, which occurs about the first of May each year. It is held at the time the peach-trees burst into bloom, and Europeans who have seen the celebration have named it the Festival of the Peach Flowers.

On this day the girls and women array themselves in holiday attire. The mothers arrange a room with the blossoming sakura boughs and make an exhibition of the large number of dolls which their daughters have received. The children prepare a banquet for them, which is eaten by the grown folks in the evening after the dolls are supposed to have eaten their fill.

Puzzle Picture.

Where is the prime minister?

Making Saltpeater from Air.

For ages whenever persons wished to make a particularly strong statement about the impossibility of doing anything, they were more likely than not to say, "I can't pull it out of the air, can I?"

Now Professor Muthmann, of the Polytechnical Academy in Munich, has found a way by which things can be pulled out of the air. He has demonstrated that by passing high electric currents through moist air, from one platinum point to another, nitric acid is formed and can be gathered by the use of suitable apparatus. He has shown that saltpeater can be "pulled out of the air" at less than one-fourth of its present cost.

How to Pronounce It.

Ask a friend to pronounce "bac-kache," spelling it out very slowly in three syllables. Most people try to make it sound like Hindustani, or something equally outlandish, and they are rather astonished when informed that it is just the simple little word "backache."

TOO LONESOME IN PRAGUE.

Old City Made the Consul Long for Something Modern.

"Did you ever realize what a rasping sound a foreign language can have upon the human ear in a strange city where one has no friends?" asked Judge A. A. Freeman of New Mexico, in the lobby of the Ebbitt. A veteran figure, Judge Freeman has held many offices of honor and emolument, having served for eight years as assistant attorney general in charge of the legal work of the postoffice department.

"President Grant appointed me consul to Prague, the ancient capital of Bohemia," continued the judge, who sat on the bench in New Mexico. "It is a beautiful old city, with many things to delight the visitor, but I was exceedingly lonesome there. The people were all strangers to me and I did not understand the language. There were hundreds of remarkable places and buildings, places rich with historical interest, for Prague was founded in the year 900. But even the ancient historical places enhanced my gloom, and I began to realize how it is that soldiers can actually die of homesickness."

"One day I visited an ancient synagogue in one of the quaint sections of the city. The guide took me to the aged tombstones, where the inscriptions had been worn off by the elements. He was piloting me, a man weary of delving into the past, among the graves of the long ago and reciting what those graves were."

"My dear man," I exclaimed in despair, "can't you show me a grave that was made yesterday? It would be positively companionable."

"It wasn't long afterward," concluded the judge, "that I resigned my consulship in the beautiful old city of Prague. It was too lonesome there for me."—Washington Post.

CAPTURED THE WRONG LION.

How Head Walter Came to Have Honors Thrust Upon Him.

The career of a social lion hunter is liable to be attended with an occasional disappointment, even though on the whole successful. Burton Holmes, on some of his tours as a lecturer, has been considerably lionized and he tells this story of a compliment which he missed, but which was enjoyed by another. He was lecturing in an eastern city, and a reception was given in his honor at the principal hotel of the place.

Among those who attended this reception was a woman prominent socially, who has established a sort of "salon" and receives her friends Sunday afternoons, trying to provide a "lion" or two for each occasion.

Burton Holmes was so fortunate as not to be presented to the fair lion hunter, but she presented herself to the man she had stalked for her game, and urged upon him her invitation for the Sunday afternoon. He very modestly attempted to decline it. His excuses were not accepted, and the victim consented to appear. Extra arrangements were made for this occasion and the fact that Mr. Holmes was to be there was heralded abroad. On the day all the youth and beauty of the place gathered together awaiting the advent of a somewhat tardy lion, who was received with every mark of consideration and appeared to be embarrassed thereby. The head waiter had been mistaken for the eminent lecturer.

Jairus' Daughter.

The little girl, twelve summers years, was past, and she was fallen on sleep. When to her side the Master came, uttering strange music in her ears. And with the touch of a new birth. That, like a fine and fragrant flame, Through every vain sweet full and deep, Called her again to happy earth.

How far in heaven her little feet Had followed, there none to say, What atmosphere of love the while Wrapped her like sunshine warm and sweet.

What soft wings stooped about her there, The gracious light of what glad smile, What tenderness along the way Met and caressed her everywhere.

Whether she saw in rank o'er rank—First venturing into the dawn alone—A phalanx of archangels shine, Or whether on some blossom-bank A cloud of cherubs sang and sang, One knew not, nor if all divine. She saw; and the Great White Throne, The rainbow like an emerald hang.

Yet earth must needs be sweet to her After that voice, that touch of grace, The heavenly peace imparted then, For her best hands to minister.

And still a question comes to me, Or days are heaven was hers again, And which of all her wandering race Child of that little maid might be, —Fannie Prescott Spofford in Youth's Companion.

Very Human.

F. L. Colver, president of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly Publishing company, has a mechanical playing attachment for the piano at his suburban home in Tenafly. On a recent evening while Mr. Colver was entertaining some friends, it so happened that the attachment did not operate properly, something being wrong with the mechanism.

"What remarkable devices these new mechanical attachments are, anyway," remarked one of the guests. "I declare they seem to be almost human!"

"Yes," responded Mr. Colver, as he continued to tinker with the attachment, "you see, this one even has to be coaxed to play!"—New York Times.

Favors Young Men for Office.

Schwab likes to help worthy young men. Himself a protégé of Andrew Carnegie, he has gathered about him several able youngsters who are proud to set themselves down as his proteges. There is one in particular, now a resident of New York. His name is Benner. His age is 32. Schwab, Carnegie & Co. have made him president of a corporation at a salary of $25,000 a year and it is believed that he is a cheap man at that price. Mr. Benner is a bachelor, living in superb apartments at the Pierpont.

Breaks the Bottle.

Rear Admiral Francis R. Bowles, chief constructor of the navy and somewhat of an authority on launching, is the inventor of an apparatus whereby the air-chestner has only to let go of the bottle as the ship moves and watch it swing unerringly to the bow.

RACEHORSES IN OLD AGE; MANY ARE DRAWING CABS

The question of the ultimate disposition of the pins and needles has been debated most exhaustively, and possibly the subject has been satisfactorily settled. The problem as to what becomes of all the racehorses is rather more intricate and requires diligent inquiry.

"What becomes of all the racehorses?" was asked of Frank Farrell, owner of Blues and the Greater New York baseball club, which are said to be coupled in the setting.

"I don't know," replied Mr. Farrell with deliberation, "but I have strong convictions as to what should become of some of them."

It was evident Mr. Farrell's usually sunny disposition had been temporarily clouded by a loss of confidence in some members of the equine family, and the writer did not press the query.

When John E. Madden was asked the question he said cheerily:

"Why, that's easy. They keep traveling about like the birds. Go South and West in the winter and North in the summer. Yes, sir, this promises to be the greatest racing season in the history of the sport." As the replies of Messrs. Farrell and Madden seemed to be lacking in detail the writer asked the same question of W. C. Fessenden, trainer, owner and former baseball expert.

"What becomes of the racehorses, eh?" he echoed. "Well, my boy, nine out of ten break down. As soon as that happens they are sold for what they will bring. There is many a horse that once raced home winner in a classic event to the shouts of thousands who now pulls a hack or a peddler's cart."

"Joe Cotton, once a grand hand-cap horse, is drawing a hack in Boston, while the mighty Banquet now earns his cats hauling a London cab. Salvator, Hanover, Hamburg and others are more fortunate, as they are in the stud.

"But the number of stallions is being steadily restricted, with the result of a very large increase in the percentage of geldings on the track. The object is to do away with the large number of cheap and useless stallions. The result will be the narrowing of sires to the most select strains and consequent improvement in the breed."

"Why does so large a proportion of thoroughbreds break down?" "That is due to the early age at which they are raced. Financial rewards seem to be for the owners of two-year-olds, and, of course, they do not miss their opportunities. A special effort is made in the development and racing of horses of that age, and as a majority often are not strong enough to stand the work they break down. Fully 60 per cent of two-year-olds fail to pass successfully through the ordeal of racing, and of the horses that begin as two-year-olds not one in a hundred is fit for racing at five years old. A large proportion is incapacitated for work on the track at four years."

"As to the mares, very few of them are of any value as racers after their fifth year. They have a better future than the geldings and stallions, for there is always a lively demand for good breed mares."

"However, as improvement in breeding goes on, we may develop a two-year-old that will better stand the vicissitudes of campaigning."—New York Press.

HOW UNPOPULAR LAW GOT ON THE STATUTE BOOKS

"Poor weather for skunking," remarked one of the regular patrons of the stove corner of the store as he took his seat and shook the accumulation of snow from his shaggy whiskers.

"Gaiest the law to catch 'em, any way," commented the village wise man.

"Did you ever hear how that law come to be passed?" queried the oracle, as he bit off a fresh chew of navy plug.

No one had heard of it, but the wit of the hearer ventured a remark that "the offense was rank," and smelled to the Canada border.

The oracle continued, "It was Rev. Denison of Jamestown. It's a good thing for the skunks, but it's a joke on the reverend. You see, Mr. Denison was formerly pastor of the Baptist church at Cherry creek, and while there he joined the grange and became an active member. A while ago he moved up to Jamestown and assumed the pastorate of the Calvary Baptist church of that city. He retained his membership in the grange. In fact he was a member of Union grange, which meets in Jamestown, and which is the largest and liveliest grange in the whole country. He was a conspicuous member of the grange, too, being in fact the chaplain."

"What's that got to do with skunks?" queried one of the group.

HOW STUART ROBSON GOT HIS PARTNER IN TROUBLE

A very pompous old fellow attracted my attention one evening in a restaurant, the late Stuart Robson, on his last visit to Washington, said to a newspaper man. "This old chap had the stiff dignity of an emperor, and it suddenly occurred to me that it would be amusing to give him some sort of a shock. On the spur of the moment I walked up behind him, slapped him on the back and exclaimed:

"Hello, George, my dear fellow, how are you?" "He turned so suddenly that he upset his plate. He was wild with rage."

"Why, I don't know you, sir. How dare you take such liberties with me?" he stuttered.

"I apologized, saying that I had mistaken him for some one else, but he could not be mollified. As I withdrew he glared scornfully after me, all red and tremulous with anger."

"Crane and I were playing together at the time, and in a little while Crane, with whom I had an appointment to dine, arrived. I pointed out the pompous old chap to him.

"Wouldn't it be funny," I said, to shatter that old fellow's dignity by slapping him on the back and saying, 'Hello, George. Why, it must be years since I've seen you?'"

"Crane looked at him, and gave a loud laugh. 'By jove, I'll do it,' he said."

"Oh, no, don't," said I. 'He might make a scene.'

"But when Crane gets an idea in his head nothing can drive it out. He now walked up behind the old man, slapped him heartily between the shoulders and cried:

"Hello, George, my dear fellow, What a long time it has been since I've seen you."

"I saw the old man, purple with rage, jump up from his seat hastily, and I withdrew. For I perceived that a scene or something worse was imminent, and I have always been an enemy to scenes."

Her Birdlike Voice.

She was a proud young mother, and she was telling the crusty old bachelor how talented her little girl was, while that angel child ate sticky candy and pawed the bachelor's immaculate shirt-front and plied him with questions in a phonograph voice. "She sings beautifully," said the mother. "Why, song flows as naturally from her as from a birdy." "From a parrot, I suppose," growled the brute.

"Silence Is Golden."

A thoughtful looking man was eating his lunch in a restaurant. Suddenly he said musingly, "I wonder who invented the phrase, 'Silence is golden?'" "Probably some poor fellow who had a wife, a parrot, a seven-year old boy, a phonograph and a barber," said his companion with the bitterness of one who knows whereof he speaketh.

NOT TO BE TRUSTED.

Why Conductor Thought Women Should Not Have Ballot.

How many-sided and how funny is the life lead in a city street car. Not long ago a woman gave the conductor of one a dollar bill. On receiving the change she counted and recounted it. "This is not right," she called after him. "Ain't, eh; there's 95 cents. Don't suppose yer wanta ride free." She made another mental calculation and blushing subsided. As the man reached the rear platform he was heard to grumble: "And them's the things as wants to vote."

Wig Good Cause for Divorce.

The widow of a large estate owner in Germany, who recently married a count of small means, has obtained a separation from her second husband on exceedingly novel grounds. After the marriage the bride discovered that her husband wore a wig and received such a shock at the sight of his bald head that she took a violent antipathy to him, and commenced proceedings against him. Her suit was successful, and she obtained a separation after three weeks' marriage. The grounds upon which the decision was based were that if she had known of the wig she would never have married the count.

A Cure for Dropsy.

Sedgwick, Ark., June 22d.—Mr. W. S. Taylor of this place says:

"My little boy had Dropsy. Two doctors—the best in this part of the country—told me he would never get better, and to have seen him anyone else would have said they were right. His feet and limbs were swollen so that he could not walk nor put on his shoes."

"When the doctors told me he would surely die, I stopped giving him their medicine and began giving him Dodd's Kidney Pills. I gave him three pills a day and at the end of eight days the swelling was all gone, but as I wanted to be sure, I kept on with the pills for some time, gradually reducing the quantity, till finally I stopped altogether."

"Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly saved my child's life. Before using them he was a helpless invalid in his mother's arms from morning till night. Now he is a healthy, happy child, running and dancing and singing. I can never express our gratitude."

"Dodd's Kidney Pills entirely cured our boy after everybody, doctors and all, had given him up to die."

Adieu to France.

Adieu to France, my latest lance! Falls on thy port and bay, Rochelle! The sunrays on the surf-circled dance, And springtime, like a pleasing spell, Harmonious leads the land and sea. How long, alas! I can not tell, Ere this scene will come back to me!

The hours fleet fast, and on the must Soon shall I meet the parting sail; Soon will the outer bay be passed, And on the sky-line eyes will fall To see a streak that means the land. On, then! before the tides all gale, Hope at the helm, and in God's hand.

What doom I meet my heart will beat, For France, the debonaire and gay, She ever will in memory's seat.

Be present to my mind always, Hope whispers my return to you, Dear land, but should Fate say me nay, And this should be my latest view, Fair France, loved France, my France, adieu!

Salut a la France, salut! —John Hunter-Duvar.

Costly Skipping-Rope.

A skipping-rope has been presented by a fond Pittsburgh millionaire to his six-year-old daughter. The handles are gold, studded with an odd jewel, while the cord, the finest procurable, cost more than a dollar a per inch. When the child grows to appreciate her papa's gift. At present she treats it as if it were an ordinary rope.

An Ideal Woman's Medicine.

So says Mrs. Josie Irwin, of 325 So. College St., Nashville, Tenn., of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and never during the lifetime of this wonderful medicine has the demand for it been so great as it is to-day.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, and throughout the length and breadth of this great continent come the glad tidings of woman's sufferings relieved by it, and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women saying that it will and positively does cure the worst forms of female complaints.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all women who are puzzled about their health to write her at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Such correspondence is seen by women only, and no charge is made.

IN EVERY WALK OF LIFE.

People in every walk of life have back aches. Kidneys go wrong and the back begins to ache. Cure sick kidneys and backache quickly disappears. Read this testimony and learn how it can be done.

A. A. Boyce, a farmer living three and a half miles from Trenton, Mo., says: "A severe cold settled in my kidneys and developed so quickly that I was obliged to lay off work on account of the aching in my back and sides. For a time I was unable to walk at all, and every makeshift I tried and all the medicines I took had not the slightest effect. My back continued to grow weaker until I was unfit for anything. Mrs. Boyce noticed Dore's Kidney Pills advertised as a sure cure for just such conditions, and one day when in Trenton she brought a box home from Chas. A. Foster's drug store. I followed the directions carefully when taking them and I must say I was more than surprised and much more gratified to notice the backache disappearing gradually, until it finally disappeared."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Boyce will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

THE GOAT AND THE PLUG.

Did Darkey Was Satisfied the Animal Could Read.

Three colored men were discussing the intelligence of different animals. One claimed that the dog knew more than all other animals put together. The horse was favored by a second man, but old Peter Jackson said that, "in my opinion de goat am de 'telligentest critter livin'." I kin prove dat de goat kin read. I saw him do it, an' I know it am true. Several days ago, I wuz walkin' down street, dressed in mah best suit ob clothes, an' wearin' mah new plug hat. When I got down ob de main street I seed a billboard on which it said, "Chew Jackson's plug." A goat wuz standin' thar when I passed, an' w'en I wuz about ten feet away he must have recognized me, for de next thing I knew I went sailin' out in de mud. When I looked 'round, dat goat wuz chewin' mah plug hat for all he wuz worth. Gemenen, da is no question in mah mind about de 'telligence ob de goat. He am a wondah."

Had to Pay to Find Out.

At one of the New York theaters they are playing a piece called "A Fool and His Money." A preacher from Wisconsin was visiting Gotham last week and in passing the theater one evening was curious to know if the play conveyed the proverbial lesson suggested by its title. Stepping up to the box office, he inquired regarding the matter. "I think," said the suave party behind the grating, "that the moral of the piece is that the fool and his money gather in a moss. It will cost you $2 to find out exactly." The preacher murmured "Thank you" and withdrew. He tells the story himself.

New Way to Do Time.

Dr. Lillinkjold, of Butte, Mont., is credited with having adapted hypnosis to a novel purpose. The doctor, having been placed under arrest, tried, fined and sentenced to jail for twenty days for some small infraction of the law, deliberately hypnotized himself, saying he would awaken from his trance at the expiration of twenty days. All efforts to awaken him were unsuccessful till the end of that period. As a mean of "doing" time, or of willing away long intervals, Dr. Lillinkjold's plan is probably unique.

Good-by.

Pasquale's Strategy

Julia Morelli lived on the top floor of the three-storyed rickety old building in the rear of the four-storyed rickety old building that looked out on Mulberry street. The four-storyed building had a little air and sunlight to give to its hundreds of men, women and children.

In the winter the building in the rear was comfortable as a home, but in the summer it was fearfully hot, and everybody had to sleep on the roof. Here little Julia, for she was only fourteen years old and small for her age, could lie awake at night and look up at the stars and dream of Pasquale.

He was her neighbor. He lived in the front house. He was eighteen, and he was tall and brave, and gave her the peanuts and apples that he could not sell, so that she loved him and he loved her.

Julia's father was a shoemaker, and had but little liking for Pasquale. All of the Bucios had been ne'er-do-wells, he declared; the father had pushed and left his only son nothing but a dud and a barrel of apples and a bag of peanuts. Pasquale had worked hard, he admitted, but he was not in a good position, and his trade did not pay well, for the policeman ate half his stock in trade on some days, and on other days waited until he had sold three dollars' worth of apples and peanuts, and then arrested him and took him off to cart, where he was fined all that he had made. No, Pasquale was not the man for Julia, her father declared, for she was extravagant and used to every comfort, such as shoes in the summer time and new shawls when the patriotic sons of Italy had their picnics in Lion Park. So Julia was told never to think of Pasquale again.

Julia was sure that she loved Pasquale, and she knew that he loved her, too. So that it was all soon arranged. Pasquale said that he would make a formal offer of his heart and hand, and then, if her father would not let them get married, why they would do so anyhow and ask his consent afterward. Then he went away.

The next morning when her mother went out to market she was ready. She crept down the stairs and then through the alley to Mulberry street and then down to the Bowery. Pasquale was waiting for her. They got on the elevated and went away up town.

"Now we are safe," said Pasquale; "they will never seek for us up this far, and I have bought a shoeblack stand up here and we will soon be rich—and so happy."

"When are we to be married?" asked Julia, her heart beating violently at the mere prospect of so much happiness.

"You will trust me, won't you, my loved one?" said Pasquale. "I have a scheme. We will not be married yet."

"Oh, oh!" cried Julia, her heart sick with horror.

"Wait a moment, my precious," cried Pasquale. "I am going to take you to my aunt's house. She is good and kind, and will see that no harm comes to you. Besides, I have my scheme, you know."

So Julia went to live with Pasquale's aunt and stayed there three days. She was happy, for Pasquale could come to see her whenever he wanted to, and there was no need arm. Pasquale could see the carrots and the onions and the beets. She saw Pasquale. Her surprise gave him an opportunity and Pasquale dashed on Mulberry street. The four-storyed building had a little air and sunlight to give to its hundreds of men, women and children.

"Thieves!" cried the old woman. Pasquale was down the steps in a minute. The old woman ran after him.

"Thieves! Stop him!" she shrieked, and the carrots and onions and beets fell out of her basket all over the sidewalk.

Pasquale dashed into the Bowery. A policeman tripped him up and he fell, but still he held on to the little red shawl and the bundle of Julia's clothing.

The policeman sat on Pasquale's chest until the old woman came up. She said that he had robbed her. Pasquale was taken to the station.

"Oh, never mind," said Pasquale, coolly.

He sent for Julia to come down and see him at once. She arrived just as he was being taken to the Tombs. He told her to go to the Tombs and take a seat in the rear of the court so that nobody could see her. Julia pulled her shawl down over her eyes and was in her seat when Pasquale was brought in.

Julia's father was there. She could see that he was very angry. Pasquale and Julia's father talked.

"Where is my daughter?" cried the old man.

"Oh, never mind," said Pasquale, coolly.

The old man ground his teeth and clenched his fist.

"You have taken her from me. You have stolen her. You are not married to her, are you, eh—eh, I say, are you?"

"Oh, never mind," answered Pasquale, in whose scheme this question—which he had fully expected—played a paramount part.

The old man was livid with rage. "You shall marry her," he cried.

"Oh, never mind," said Pasquale.

The old man was furious. He stormed and raved. Then Julia came forward at a signal from Pasquale, and with tears and kisses they all left the court.

At the city hall they were married. Julia wore her red shawl, and as she and her husband walked out arm in arm to get into the carriage which her father had ordered, Pasquale said:

"What do you think of my scheme now, eh?"

Julia pressed his hand and looked up into his eyes and smiled.—Warren McVeigh in Boston Journal.

Snub for the Rector.

The Rev. W. S. Rainsford, rector of St. George's, the noted New York church, told in Philadelphia—on the day he preached the sermon that caused him to be charged with heresy—of a snub an old lady once gave him.

"I had the habit in my youth," said Dr. Rainsford, "of conditioning all my proposed actions with the phrase, 'Deo volente,' or 'God willing,' or something of that sort. An aged woman, the head of an aristocratic family, invited me one morning to dine with her the following night.

"I shall be delighted to dine with you, madam," I said, 'if I am spared.' The terminal phrase seemed to displease her. Perhaps she thought she sniffed cant in it. She frowned and said:

"Oh, if you're dead I'll not expect you."—Kansas City Journal.

The Month Tragedy.

William McCrow, former bartender for August Braun, was almost instantly killed by the latter at the Month hotel, 14 miles southeast of Jackson, Saturday night. Thursday, McCrow, who was about 30 years old, came from Detroit after a spree, and finding that a man had been engaged in his place was very angry.

Saturday, however, he slept at the hotel, and in the course of the night well diggers asleep in a room adjoining were awakened by the sound of smashing furniture in McCrow's room. Knowing that he had both a rifle and a shotgun, and fearing for their lives, they quickly left the hotel after calling Braun. The latter hastily dressed, and with his wife and baby fled to the home of Constable Freymuth, whom they were trying to arouse by rapping on the door when McCrow appeared on the scene.

"I am going to kill you," he shouted at Braun, "and kill your wife, too." Braun, without hesitating a moment swung an iron bar which he had picked up on the way and McCrow went down with the threat on his lips, dying a few minutes later.

Braun has not yet been placed in jail, the officials merely accepting his personal promise to be present at the inquest Wednesday. His offer to give bonds was refused. He will undoubtedly be exonerated.

The Law Defective.

What may prove a fatal defect has been discovered in the act amending the pure food laws, and it is possible the price in calories the bill was passed to permit, may not be had. The title says the act is to amend, among others, Section 2, while the body of the bill says it is Section 12. As the provision covered is that authorizing the auditor-general to raise $25,000 annually for maintaining the department, it is thought the error invalidates the law.

Scattering Smallpox.

William Burkett, station agent for the Big Bear at Summitville, Ind., came to Benton Harbor to visit his wife yesterday while suffering from a well-developed case of smallpox. His wife and family and several neighbors were exposed before they knew what it was. The disease had been nearly stamped out after many months. Burkett said that half the town of Summitville was broken out just as he was, but the people didn't know it was smallpox.

Progress at the Kansas Branch Station.

From the Farmers' Review: The heavy snows and early rains put the ground in good shape for spring work. The 200 acres of fall wheat sown is excellent. Of the 165 varieties sown, all but 22 came through the winter. Of those that did not get through the larger part failed on account of poor seed as no stand was secured. A few winter killed. Only one of the nine varieties of rye sown gives promise. The area devoted to each variety varies from the small space given a few grains to over twenty acres. The larger number are hybrids of the best varieties in this section, and varieties that have been introduced from other countries where conditions are similar. It is the object to watch each variety carefully, with the hope of finding better yieldings, and more desirable varieties. Careful notes are taken frequently regarding each variety. Some of them have already shown great promise. The Macaroni wheats are also receiving attention. Five varieties were sown on sod last spring, and in addition thirteen new varieties have been sown, covering an area of nearly 40 acres. Also 22 varieties of barley, and 18 varieties of oats have been sown this spring. This makes 230 varieties of small grain on an area of 340 acres. The work with grains and grasses is largely in co-operation with the United States Department of Agriculture. Work in irrigation is also being begun in co-operation with the irrigation investigation. Large wells are being put down, and centrifugal pumps will be used to raise the water, which will be applied to various crops in comparison with the same crops not irrigated. Quite a number of varieties of corn will also be tried. These have been collected from Old Mexico and other places in the drier parts of the country. As a beginning in horticulture and forestry, 400 fruit trees, consisting of apples, peaches, plums and cherries, and 300 berries have been planted. One thousand forest trees have been set for shelter and shade. Four thousand small seedling cedars and pines are planted under a partial shade to give them as nearly as possible natural conditions. After two years in the nursery they will be transplanted along the creek banks to beautify the twelve miles of timber that grows along the stream. The legislature last winter appropriated $32,500 for equipment and maintenance for the next two years.—J. G. Haney, Fort Hays, Kans.

Value of Barnyard Manure. Few realize the great value of barnyard manure, in comparison with other fertilizers. In the regions devoted to market gardening, barnyard manure is found to be a necessity, if large quantities of commercial fertilizers are to be used. In some way it assists the elements found in the manure, even though these elements may be the same as in the manure. In Germany some experiments along this line have given rather surprising results. The greatest yields of root crops were obtained only when barnyard manure was used in conjunction with the commercial fertilizers. The experimenters there express the belief that this is due to the mechanical effect on the soil of the barnyard manure. Another surprising result was the discovery that even though a very heavy application of nitrate of soda was made, the plants took up less nitrogen than when barnyard manure was used in conjunction with it, and a dressing of barnyard manure alone gave heavier crops of potatoes and turnips than when nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash were applied in their commercial forms. A new fact seems to be brought to light, as it is said that a quantity of nitrogen taken up from the barnyard manure produced more substance than when the same quantity was taken up from the commercial fertilizer. Just how much the difference was we do not know, but if considerable, it should lead to some experiments to find the cause of this.

The barnyard manure was found to be less valuable than manure from stalls where it had not been exposed to the weather.

These experiments teach lessons that are applicable to soils of old lands, or such as are deficient in nitrogen. It is evident that in soils having an abundance of available nitrogen and humus the application of barnyard manure would have little or no effect. For it is manifestly impossible to scientifically treat any soil without knowing its mechanical construction, its content of available plant food and its usual supply of humus and moisture.

Creamery Associations. In New Zealand the secretaries of the creameries have formed an organization and have held an institute. The suggestion contained in the formation of this organization will doubtless be acted upon elsewhere and will result in a closer drawing together of these interests. In this country the creamery managers doubtless hold about the same relative relation to the creameries that the secretaries do in New Zealand. It certainly would be a step in advance if the managers of creameries could get together once in awhile and hold an institute. It should result in a decided improvement of the service.

One of Nature's Tricks. It is well known that many insects bear a close resemblance to leaves, twigs and other things, and there is no doubt that this is for their protection against, or their concealment from, their enemies. One of the most remarkable cases of this kind was recently made known to the Entomological society of London. It is that of a spider that lives in the rocks near Cannes. A certain kind of moth inhabits the rocks also and their cases are to be found all about. It was noticed that the spider, when at rest, looked exactly like one of the moth cases.

MAJOR J. B. POND, whose death occurred a few days since, was probably acquainted with more notable than almost any other American. He was for many years general caterer to the lecture and concert-going public, and as he watched and followed the changes in the public's demands, he became the medium through which the most popular speakers and musicians sought their introduction to American audiences. Major Pond may be said to have created his own career by promoting that of others.

REVELATIONS concerning the treatment of negroes practically slaves in Alabama show that the old south is only thinly disguised under the new, and that nothing except opportunity is wanting to a large element in several of the states to restore the old regime with all its barbarism. Will those who insist that the south must be left to deal with the race question as it deems best defend Alabama's method of handling it?

CORNELL UNIVERSITY has made such a batch of her forestry department that Governor Odell has vetoed the appropriation of $10,000 for carrying on its work the coming year. Fire, flood and greed could not have worked more mischief. To clear 30,000 acres simply for the sake of planting them over again seems about as far from the highest ideal of forestry as it is from a profitable business administration.

THE Taft commission has made a pretty good beginning at a new order of legislation. Under the new opium regulation, an American or a Filipino may not purchase the drug for his own use, but a full-blooded adult Chinaman may buy all he has money to pay for. If that isn't class legislation, what is?

Last Meeting Before Vacation.

Next Sunday the Ypsilanti Men's class will hold its final meeting before adjournment until the first Sunday in September. Sometime ago the class was addressed by Prof. Jones of the University of Michigan on "Ways of Benefiting Our Community" from the standpoint of a civic improvement association. At that meeting it was decided to be desirable that a similar association be organized in Ypsilanti, and a committee was provided to report later. That committee will make a brief report Sunday, recommending the formation of such an organization, and Prof. G. T. Burns of the University of Michigan and secretary of the Ann Arbor Improvement association will address the meeting.

By motion of the class last Sunday, it was decided to invite the ladies of the city to be present at this meeting and participate in the organization of the association. Such organizations as the Ladies' Literary club and the Woman's Study club have in other cities interested themselves in this subject and done much to encourage it. It is hoped our city may have their co-operation as well, and that they will attend this meeting.

The time of the meeting is 11:30, standard, in the main auditorium of the Presbyterian church. You and every other citizen of our city is cordially invited to be present and to participate in this commendable movement.

The Training School.

To Parents—During the summer session of the State Normal college, July 7 to August 14, the training school will be open for work from kindergarten to the seventh grade, inclusive.

There will be but one session, from 8:30 to 11:30. The work of instruction during this time will be entirely in the hands of the regular critic teachers. The purpose is to make the instruction as nearly as possible that of a model school. The subjects which will receive special attention are nature study, manual training and such as emphasize the culture side of education. No preparation will be expected of the pupils outside of school hours. It is believed that the work will not be burdensome to any one, and that it will be of especial value to all who desire to review the work of a grade, to those who have necessarily been absent during a part of the regular school year, to such as need to strengthen themselves on any subject in a given grade, and to those who desire to do something which will apply upon a new school year.

Application for admission may be made on or before the date of opening at the office of the training school.

The Living Age.

The Living Age for June 6 is especially rich in timely articles. Under the title "A Passionate Pilgrim" appears a sketch of that unhappy Julie de Lespinasse, who suggested to Mrs. Ward the heroine of "Lady Rose's Daughter." One of his former pupils gives reminiscences of "Dean Farrar as Headmaster," and a brilliant writer who signs himself "A Retired Politician" comments on "The Decay of Authority," political, social and critical.

The Living Age adds another to its notable series on European politics by reprinting, in the number for June 13, the striking article from the last Quarterly Review, entitled "The Macedonian Maze." The writer is outspoken in his criticism of the methods of the Macedonian Revolutionary Committee.

The carefully prepared article on the late Archbishop Temple which has just appeared in the Church Quarterly Review, will interest many American readers. The Living Age for June 20 reproduces it.

Charles Hanbury Williams, whose travel sketches from the Dominion have been so vivacious, now sums up the result of his observations in an article in more serious vein: "The American Invasion of Northwestern Canada." It will be found in the Living Age for June 20.

A woman worn-out, who never has to lift a hand for herself, who does not know the meaning of the word "worry"! How can it be possible? That it is possible is proved by the experience of many a woman who, because of sleeplessness, nervousness, backache and other womanly ills, becomes an utter physical wreck.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription gives new life and new strength to weak, worn-out, run-down women. It establishes regularity, dries unhealthy drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

I suffered for five years with inflammation which caused violent pain and often torture so bad at times that I could not be about to attend to my daily duties," writes Mrs. Julia C. Bell, of Bathurst, Kingston, Ont. "Life was simply misery to me and I did not know which way to turn for relief. Had tried doctors but found they did not help me. My druggist advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—sublimizing it in glowing terms. I decided to give it a trial and brought a bottle home. I am happy to say that after the use of the first bottle I felt so much improved I decided to take another and after that a third bottle. I have good reasons to be pleased for I am today a well woman, work is easy and the world looks bright. I have perfect health, thanks to your medicine."

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used with "Favorite Prescription" whenever a laxative is required.

Crocodiles in Water.

The crocodiles are thoroughly aquatic in their habits, and their peculiar conformation enables them to attack and seize their prey unawares. Their nostrils, which lead by a long canal to the back part of their throats, their eyes and their ears are placed on the upper part of the head, so that when in the water they can breathe, see and hear, while they are themselves practically invisible. When they dive, their nostrils and ears are closed by lids or valves, and the eyes are covered by a transparent membrane. They are further furnished with an arrangement which prevents the water from getting down their own throats when they are holding large animals under the water to drown them.

The dentition of these reptiles is peculiar. The teeth are sharp and conical and are hollow at the base, and each tooth serves as the sheath of another, which will in time replace it. The tongue for notwithstanding the ancient belief the crocodile does possess a tongue—its fleshy and is attached to the bottom of the mouth. And finally the lower jaw is hinged at the very back of the skull, thus giving the animal its extraordinary gape and also the peculiar appearance which caused the notion that it moved its upper jaw.

Curious Fire Alarms.

In St. Petersburg the arrangement of fire alarms is rather peculiar and decidedly unique, and the fire alarm telegraph is an unknown thing. Instead of a bellman is at all times in the tower of the city hall, and he watches the surrounding city to catch the first glimpse of a fire. When a fire is discovered during the day, he runs up black balls on the top of the tower as signals; at night red lanterns are used. The number of the balls or lanterns shows the district or ward in which the fire is located, says a writer on "Foreign Fire Fighters" in Cosmopolitan. As soon as the signal is seen by the man on duty at the engine house he rings a bell outside, which calls together the members of the company, who may be scattered over a couple of blocks. This method is not conducive to quick time in reaching the scene, and from twenty minutes to half an hour is good work unless the fire happens to be near an engine house.

Changed His Mind.

Jinks, like other men, has a horror of infant prodigies as exhibited by their proud papas. Recently Jinks met him with:

"Hello, Jinks! What do you think my girl said this morning? She's the brightest four-year-old in town. She said—"

"Jinks smiled. 'Excuse me, old man!' he exclaimed. 'I'm on my way to keep an engagement. Some other time!'"

"She said, 'Papa, that Mr. Jinks is the handsomest man I know.' Haw, haw, haw! How's that for precocity, eh?"

And Jinks replied: "Binks, I'm a little early for my engagement. That youngster certainly is a bright one. Come into this toy store and help me select a few things that will please a girl of her taste, and I'll send them to her, if you don't mind."—New York Times.

Good Paste.

Not every man can make a good food paste that can be preserved without decay or mold. When such a paste is needed, try the following: Mix good, clean flour with cold water into a thick paste and continue mixing until the flour and water are well blended. Now add boiling water and stir until it is thin enough to spread with a brush.

Add to this a spoonful or two of brown sugar, a little corrosive sublimate and a few drops of oil of lavender and you will have a paste that will hold with wonderful tenacity.

In Holland. Many of the country dames and damsels in Holland look as if they had been brought up on soap and water. Their faces glisten so preternaturally, their pots and pans, the red tiles of their floors, their tables and benches all bear witness so unmistakably to their cleanliness. I suppose a fly in the butter they were churning or a mixed foot on the boards they have but just scrubbed would be as nearly likely to give them a fit as anything could be.—Chambers' Journal.

Eyeless Fish in Boiling Water.

One of the most remarkable discoveries in the shape of a peculiar species of fish ever made on this continent was that made at Carson City, Nev., in 1876. At that time both the Hale and Norcross and the Savage mines were down to what is known as the "2,200 foot level." When at that depth, a subterranean lake of boiling water was tapped. This accident flooded both mines to a depth of 400 feet. After this water had all been pumped out except that which had gathered in basins and in the inaccessible portions of the works, and when the water still had a temperature of 128 degrees—nearly scalding hot—many queer looking little blood red fish were taken out. In appearance they somewhat resembled the goldfish.

They seemed lively and sportive enough when they were in their native element—boiling water—notwithstanding the fact that they did not even have rudimentary eyes. When the fish were taken out of the hot water and put in buckets of cold water for the purpose of being transported to the surface, they died as quickly as a perch or a bass would if plunged into a kettle of water that was scalding hot; not only this, but the skin peeled off exactly as if it had been boiled.

Eyeless fish are common enough in all subterranean lakes and rivers, but this is the only case on record of living fish being found in boiling water.

Passing a Plate in a Church.

There was a very large congregation, and the rector seeing that there was only one alms dish made signs to a rustic from the chancel entrance to come to him and bade him go into the rectory garden through a glass door into the dining room, where there had been a slight refection before the service, bring a dish from the table, take it down one side of the north aisle and up the other and then bring it to the clergyman at the place from which he started. The rustic disappeared, reappeared with the dish, took it as he was ordered and presented it to the people on either side of the aisle, and then approaching the rector whispered in his ear: "I've done as yer told me, sir. I've taken it down you side of the aisle and up t'other—they'll none of 'em 'ave any." No order had been given to empty the dish, and it was full of biscuits!—Dean Hole's "Memories."

Shellac in Chinese Works of Art.

By softening shellac with heat it may be drawn out and twisted into almost white sticks and of a fine silky luster. Extreme beauty is given to Chinese works of art by the use of shellac. Some of them are very ancient and of great value. They are chiefly chowchow boxes, tea basins or other small objects made of wood or metal. They are covered with a coat of shellac, colored with vermilion, and while the layer of shellac is soft and pliable it is molded and shaped into beautiful patterns. Some of these works thus ornamented are so rare and beautiful that even in China they cost fabulous sums.

He Forgave the Bishop.

A certain bishop, an ardent advocate of teetotalism, found one of his flock, to whom he had preached for years, leaning in helpless drunkenness against a wall.

"Wilkins!" cried the bishop, inexpressibly shocked. "Oh, Wilkins! You in this state! I am sorry; I am sorry; I am sorry!"

As the bishop was passing by on the other side Wilkins pulled himself together and blurted out after him:

"Bishop, hastened back in the hope of hearing a resolution of repentance."

"Bishop, if you are really sorry I forgive you!"

A Bird Much Like a Fish.

The "birds of a feather" that "rock together" do not belong to the penguin family, as they are entirely destitute of feathers, having for a covering a kind of stiff down. Another penguin peculiarity is that it swims not on, but under, water, never keeping more than its head out and when fishing coming to the surface at such brief and rare intervals that an ordinary observer would almost certainly mistake it for a fish.

Discouraging.

"My dear sir," wrote the editor to the persistent young author, "in order to simplify matters somewhat we are enclosing a bunch of our 'declined with thanks' notices. If you will put one of these in an envelope with your manuscript and mail it to yourself, it will make it easier for all of us, and you will be saving something in postage as well."—Chicago Post.

Goldfish.

There are some goldfish in Washington which belonged to the same family for the last fifty years, and they seem no bigger and no less vivacious today than they did when they first came into the owner's possession. A few of the fish in the Royal aquarium in St. Petersburg are known to be 150 years old.

Depressing.

"Were there laughter and cheers during your speech?"

"Well," answered the youthful statesman, "there weren't many cheers, but now and then people in the audience looked at one another and laughed."—Washington Star.

Joseph L. McPherson, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is one of the complainants in the foregoing bill of complaint, and that the name of the person, since deceased, who executed the deed which he now seeks to have reformed was Lucy Ann Hale, and that he has made diligent search to find the names and residences of the heirs of said Lucy Ann Hale, but he has been utterly unable to do so.

Dependent further says that said unknown heirs are proper parties to this proceeding. Further this deponent says that he is a Notary Public in and for the County of Washtenaw, State of Michigan, and is duly sworn to before me this 12th day of May, 1903.

WIRY MCCLAIN, Notary Public, Washtenaw Co., Mich.

State of Michigan: In the Circuit Court for the county of Washtenaw—in Chancery. Upon due proof by affidavit that the heirs of Lucy Ann Hale, defendants in the above entitled cause pending in this court, are unknown to the complainants, and on motion of Fred W. Green, solicitor for complainants, it is ordered that the said defendants do appear and answer the bill of complaint filed in the said cause within six months from the date of this order, else the said bill of complaint shall be taken as confessed. And further, that this order be published within twenty days from this date in The Ypsilantian, a newspaper printed in said county of Washtenaw, and be published therein once in each week for six weeks in succession; such publication, however, shall not be necessary in case a copy of this order be served on the said defendants personally, at least twenty days before the time herein prescribed for their appearance. Dated this 13th day of May, A. D. 1903.

E. D. KINNE, Circuit Judge.

1000 CLAIMS

Equal Not a Single Fact—Ypsilanti Endorsement Makes This Claim a Fact.

Endorsed by scores of Ypsilanti citizens, who cheerfully make a public statement of their experience, is the proof we have to back our claims that Doan's Kidney Pills cure every form of kidney ills, from a common backache to serious urinary disorders. Here is one local example. We have many more like it.

Mrs. A. Morris of 15 South Grove street says: "I am willing, very willing, to lend any aid in my power to induce sufferers from backache or kidney trouble to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial. My condition before getting Doan's Kidney Pills at Weinmann & Matthews' drug store was a constant soreness across my back, and when stooping or exerting myself the pain became very sharp. If I took a cold it always settled in my kidneys, and it was accompanied by too frequent action of the kidney secretions. I could notice a marked improvement in a very short time. I continued the treatment until I had used two boxes. I have not felt the pain in my back to amount to anything since, and the kidney secretions are normal in action. I emphatically declare Doan's Kidney Pills to be up to the representations made for them."

Sold for 50 cents per box by all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no substitute.

Fight Will Be Bitter.

Those who will persist in closing their ears against the continual recommendation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption will have a long and bitter fight with their troubles. It did not end earlier by fatal termination. Read what T. R. Beall of Beall, Miss. has to say: "Last fall my wife had every symptom of consumption. She took Dr. King's New Discovery after everything else had failed. Improvement came at once, and four bottles entirely cured her." Guaranteed by Smith Bros., Rogers, Weinmann-Matthews Co. Price 50c and $1. Trial bottles free.

Win hearts, and you have all men's hands and purses—Burling.

Interesting to Asthma Sufferers.

Daniel Bante of Otterville, Ia., writes: "I have had asthma for three or four years and have tried about all the cough and asthma cures in the market and have received treatment from physicians in New York and other cities, but got very little benefit until I tried Foley's Honey and Tar, which gave me immediate relief, and I will never be without it in my house. I sincerely recommend it to all." Sold by Frank Smith.

From labor, health; from health, contentment springs.—Beattie.

New Kind of Life Insurance.

For twenty-five cents you can insure yourself and family against any serious results from an attack of bowel complaint during the summer months. That is the price of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, a medicine that can always be depended upon even in the most severe and dangerous cases. It is equally valuable for children and adults. When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take. This remedy has relieved more pain and suffering and saved the lives of more people than any other medicine in the world. It is almost sure to be needed before the summer is over. Buy it now. For sale by Frank Smith.

Sympathy with nature is a part of the good man's religion.—F. H. Hedge.

Was Wasting Away.

The following letter from Robert B. Watts of Salem, Mo., is instructive. "I have been troubled with kidney disease for the last five years. I lost flesh and never felt well and doctored with leading physicians and tried all the remedies suggested without relief. Finally I tried Foley's Kidney Cure, and less than two bottles completely cured me and I am now sound and well." Sold by Frank Smith.

The public man needs but one patron—namely, the lucky moment.—Bulwer.

Revolution Imminent.

A sure sign of approaching revolt and serious trouble in your system is nervousness, sleeplessness, or stomach upsets. Electric Bitters will quickly dismember the troublesome causes. It never fails to tone the stomach, regulate the kidneys and bowels, stimulate the liver, and clarify the blood. Run down systems benefit particularly, and all the usual attending aches vanish under its searching and thorough effectiveness. Electric Bitters is only 50c, and that is returned if it don't give perfect satisfaction. Guaranteed by Smith Bros., Rogers-Weinmann-Matthews Co., druggists.

There is no index of character as sure as the voice.—Disraeli.

Delicacy is to the mind what fragrance is to the fruit.—A. Polncelot.

Go Prepared.

In preparing for your summer outing a little forethought may save you no end of trouble. Mr. John H. Manly, a dry goods merchant of Bellville, R. I., while packing an outfit for camping a few weeks on Narragansett Bay, put in a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for emergency use. The second day in camp his little boy was taken with cramp colic. The first dose of this remedy gave relief and the second dose effected a cure. Think of the pain and suffering this boy would have had to endure without this remedy at hand to relieve him. Such cases often result fatally. For sale by Frank Smith.

Warning.

If you have kidney or bladder trouble and do not use Foley's Kidney Cure, you will have only yourself to blame for results, as it positively cures all forms of kidney and bladder diseases. Sold by Frank Smith.

LESSON XIII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 28.

Text of the Lesson, a Comprehensive Quarterly Review—Golden Text, II Tim. iv, 18—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

LESSON I.—Paul's farewell to Ephesus (Acts xx, 28-38.) Golden Text, Acts xx, 35, "Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, It is more blessed to give than to receive." In this farewell address he emphasizes the supremacy of the Holy Spirit in all church affairs, that all believers constitute the church of God purchased with His blood, that God only by His word is able to build up and establish His redeemed and that with the earnestness that Paul himself manifested we are to seek not only our own upbuilding, but that of all others with watchfulness and prayer.

LESSON II.—The Resurrection (I Cor. xv, 20, 21, 50-58.) Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 20, "Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." Not merely a good man and a great teacher, but an absolutely perfect man, who, having no sin of his own, became a substitute for all sinners, having the sins of the world laid upon Him, died, the just for the unjust, bearing our sins in His own body, and rose again from the dead, to be the Saviour of all who will accept Him and the judge of all mankind—this is the Christ whom we receive and preach.

LESSON III.—The law of love (Rom. xiii, 7-14.) Golden Text, Rom. xiii, 10, "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." The redeemed of the Lord are expected to magnify Him in their bodies by manifesting His life in them (Phil. i, 20; II Cor. iv, 10, 11) and as His love was manifested in laying down His life for us, so we are to lay down our lives for others (I John iii, 16); not simply working no ill, but working positive good, manifesting Christ, the Saviour of sinners.

LESSON IV.—Paul's journey to Jerusalem (Acts xxi, 3-12.) Golden Text, Acts xxi, 14, "The will of the Lord be done." Paul is on his way to Jerusalem, ready to be bound as a prisoner if it please God, or even to die for the name of the Lord Jesus, therefore he cannot be persuaded to stop or turn back, though twice on the journey he is warned that trouble awaits him and is forbidden by the Spirit to go on.

LESSON V.—Paul arrested (Acts xxi, 30-39.) Golden Text, I Pet. iv, 16, "If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed." He was welcomed by the brethren at Jerusalem, and he declared to them the things that God had wrought through him (verses 17, 19). At the suggestion of the brethren he did what they hoped might appease the Jews, who were zealous of the law, but it was of no avail, and they would have killed him if the chief captain had not rescued him from them.

LESSON VI.—The plot against Paul (Acts xxiii, 12-22.) Golden Text, Acts xxiii, 11, "The Lord stood by him and said, Give heed to what thou sayest." He was welcomed by the brethren at Jerusalem, and he declared to them the things that God had wrought through him (verses 17, 19). At the suggestion of the brethren he did what they hoped might appease the Jews, who were zealous of the law, but it was of no avail, and they would have killed him if the chief captain had not rescued him from them.

LESSON VII.—Paul before Felix (Acts xxiv, 10-16, 24-26.) Golden Text, Ps. xxiii, 4, "I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." While a prisoner at Caesarea Paul not only testified before Felix, the governor, in the presence of his enemies, who came up from Jerusalem to witness against him and seek his death, but Felix often sent for him and communed with him (verse 26).

LESSON VIII.—Paul before Agrippa (Acts xxvi, 19-29.) Golden Text, Acts xxvi, 22, "Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day." Festus having succeeded Felix after two years finds Paul still a prisoner, and again the Jews from Jerusalem testify against him.

LESSON IX.—The life giving Spirit (Rom. viii, 1-14.) Golden Text, Rom. viii, 14, "For as many as are led by the spirit of God they are the sons of God." In the Acts we have but brief accounts of Paul's discourses, but in his epistles we learn fully all he taught and that he insisted on the sinfulness and utter helplessness of man by nature, but that without works, through Christ's work, any sinner receiving Him becomes righteous before God and indwelt by the Spirit, who will control the whole being if allowed to do so.

LESSON X.—Paul's voyage and shipwreck (Acts xxvii, 33-44.) Golden Text, Ps. ciii, 28, "Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and He bringeth them out of their distresses." From the day that the Lord Jesus appeared to Saul on the way to Damascus He is to him the greatest of all realities. He is ever before him, and again and again He appears to him or sends him a special message by an angel.

LESSON XI.—Paul at Rome (Acts xxviii, 16-31.) Golden Text, Rom. i, 16, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." This man knew nothing but Christ, and Him crucified and risen and ascended and returning to establish His kingdom with Israel as the earthly center, but his special mission was to preach the gospel to the Jews and gentiles to complete the mystery, the elect church, the body of Christ.

LESSON XII.—Paul's charge to Timothy (II Tim. iii, 14, to iv, 8.) Golden Text, II Tim. iv, 8, "There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness." As we part with Paul for the present we hear him say: Preach the word, for the Spirit wrote it all, and it is all profitable; remember the judgment and the judge, and however you may be opposed, fight the good fight.

Whooping Cough Epidemic.

Last winter there was a very severe epidemic of whooping cough at Foleysville, Md. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was used almost exclusively and with perfect success. Mrs. C. F. Hadley's three boys all had the disease, and she believes this remedy saved their lives. For sale by Smith Bros., City Drug Store.

NEIGHBORHOOD BUDGET.

Sam Davis, a Reading angler, returned the other day from a disheartening expedition in which he experienced the proverbial "fisherman's luck." He leaned pole and line against the house, too disgusted to remove the minnow bait from the hook, while he sought the sympathy of his better half. Sam was relating his hard luck when he glanced through the doorway and saw the bob go down for the first time that day, and rushing out he saw the family mouser performing some astonishing aerial gyrations. For several minutes that was the busiest cat ever heard of, and after all the women in the neighborhood had gathered at the scene, pussy was finally unhooked.—Hillsdale Democrat.

No need to fear sudden attacks of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhea or summer complaint if you have Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in the medicine chest.

William A. Boland of Grass Lake was in Ann Arbor Friday. He says that work on the Jackson and Battle Creek road will be finished within two weeks, after which the whole force will be transferred the road from Grass Lake to Ann Arbor. This will be good news to those who have had their faith in Mr. Boland. He is one of the most energetic men in the country, and is bound to complete the road and make it a success.—Dexter Leader.

Register of Deeds Huston says that there are nearer 10,000 than 5000 papers in his office that have never been called for by the people who left them there for record. There are still many government patents for lands that have never been recorded. Every one who wants a clear title to his lands should see that his patent is on record.

During the summer kidney irregularities are often caused by excessive drinking or being overexerted. Attend to the kidneys at once by using Foley's Kidney Cure. Sold by Frank Smith.

The Washtenaw Farmers' Mutual has had a few small losses from lightning recently. Walter H. Dancer had a cow killed in Lima May 16. The same day Willard Nelson of Northfield had a hog killed in the same way, while Milo C. Updike of Chelsea had his barn in Sharon struck, inflicting slight damages.—Dexter Leader.

The pet terrier, who objects to wearing his muzzle, is provided with a comfortable bed, but at night, after all is quiet, he has been in the habit of going to the spare bed, much to the disgust of the owner. Punishment did not keep him off, but lately his mistress placed his muzzle there, and the sight of which keeps him from bed or cushions.—Hillsdale Leader.

Are you thin? Would you like to get fat and plump? Tried "laughing," 'twould not work—now take Rocky Mountain Tea—'twill do the business. 35c. Smith Bros.

Willard F. Day, ex-register of deeds of Hillsdale county, died last week at his home in Hudson. Mr. Day was one of the early pioneers of the county, and resided in Pittsford most of his life.

The children of Richard Smith, a mile west of Hudson, were picking strawberries the other day along the railroad track, and in crossing the cattle guards one of the little girls got both feet securely fastened. The fast mail was due and could be heard whistling a few miles away. The little sisters were frantic with fear, but had the presence of mind to run and summon a man, who unlaced the little one's shoes and released her but a few seconds before the train thundered past.—Hillsdale Democrat.

Daniel L. DeVee of London died June 9, aged 86 years.

Fay Bunting, 16 years of age, whose right hand was shattered and both eyes shot out by the accidental discharge of a shotgun on the 4th inst., is reported by his father, David Bunting, as fast recovering. The wounded hand will be entirely healed in a fortnight more, and amputation has fortunately been avoided. The boy says that he is able to discern a faint ray of light with the left eye, but the vision of the other eye is entirely destroyed.—Hillsdale Democrat.

You feel mean, cross, ugly, down in the mouth, nothing goes right. Bad liver. Better take Rocky Mountain Tea. Drives away the blues. 35c. Smith Bros.

WILLIS.

Eugene Breining died last week of appendicitis, aged 12 years. His life thus far had been in harmony with highest aims. It had been his study to improve his mind. His one desire seemed to center in the improvement of his faculties. He was beloved by his associates, who came in throngs to take part in the last sad rites, a solemn occasion marked by deep sympathy. The funeral was held at the Friends' church Wednesday, conducted by Rev. Howard Moore. Young in years, he passed into other scenes.

An endless life is his, An endless work before him lies. The mystery of death proclaims That he is free from care. That highest good and holiest aims Await him there.

For Matilda had concealed every fault and every unkindness by her prompt action in the matter of Lord Neville, and Jane had been loving and praising her for it, until the sweetness of their first affection was between them. And Matilda enjoyed praise; she liked the appreciation of her kind deed, and was not therefore disposed to make light or little of what she had done, or of its results. "And, pray, how comes my lord on towards recovery?"

"Slowly. Life was nearly gone; body and mind were at death's door; but he can walk a little now, and in two or three weeks we are going away—far away—we are going to my brothers in the Massachusetts colony."

"You will come back?"

"I think it is unlikely. Father feels a change approaching. The Protector's health is falling rapidly; he is dying, Matilda."

"If he dies?"

"Father will leave England as soon as Cromwell is in his grave. Cynlin will keep old Swaffham fair, for Cynlin will never leave England while you are in it."

"And you can bear to talk of leaving England in that calm way, without tears and without regrets. Jane, it is shameful; it is really wicked."

"Dear Matilda, do not be angry at me because I had to do what I had to do. I was married to Cluny three days after he came home. We all thought he was going to die, and he wished me to be his wife. Now did I not do right to marry him when and how, he wished?"

"Yes," she answered, but her face and voice showed her to be painfully affected. "Jane, I cannot bear to lose

"It is another friend gone," he said mournfully to his own heart; "lover and friend are put far from me and mine acquaintance into darkness."

Cluny was so much troubled and affected by this visit that Israel thought it well to take him to see the ship which was to carry him to the solitudes of the great waters and the safety of the New World. He was impatient to be gone, but there were yet a number of small interests to be attended to; for they were to carry with them a great deal of material necessary to the building and furnishing of their future home. Every day revealed some new want not before thought of, so that it was not until the end of June when at last all was declared finished and ready.

Then Jane hastened home, resolving to see Matilda on the following day. But when she reached Sardy's House, Mrs. Swaffham met her with a letter in her hand—"I am sorry to hear of your father's death," she said.

So Jane went to her friend. With her, also, she found the grief death brings.

"Stephen is slain!" were her first words. She could hardly utter them. But Jane knew how to comfort Matilda; she could talk to her as she could not to the ladies of Cromwell's household. "How was Stephen slain?" she asked, in a duel?

"No, thank God! He fell, as he himself could have wished, fighting the enemies of his king. He was with Conde and the Dukes of York and Gloucester before Dunkirk, and was killed while meeting the rush of those terrible ironclads. Camoy wrote me that he said 'Mother!' joyfully, with his last breath."

"Poor Stephen!"

Jane knew how to comfort Matilda.

you. I shall have no one to love me, no one to quarrel with," she added.

"You will have Cynlin."

"Cynlin is Cynlin; he is not you. I will say no more. When a woman is married, all is over."

Then Jane rose to go, and Matilda tied her bonnet strings and straightened out her ribbons and her gloves, doing these trifling services with a long-absent tenderness that filled Jane's heart with pleasure. "Good-bye, dear!" she said with a kiss; "I will come as often as I can."

"Very kind of you, Lady Neville," answered Matilda with a curtsy and a tearful mockery; "very kind indeed! But will your ladyship consider—"

Then she broke down and threw her arms round Jane, and called her "a dear, sweet, little baggage" and bade her give Cluny some messages of hope and congratulation, and so parted with her in a strange access of affection. But true friendship has these moods of the individual and would not be true without them.

Jane walked home through the city, and his busy turmoil struck her as never before. What a vain show it was! A passing show, constantly changing. And suddenly there was the galloping of horsemen, and the crowd stood still, and drew a little aside, while Cromwell, at the head of his guards, rode at an easy canter down the street. Every man bared his head as the grand, soldierly figure passed by. He saw Jane, and a swift smile chased away for a moment the sorrowful gravity of his face. But he left behind him a penetrating atmosphere of coming calamity. His glorious life was closing like a brilliant sun setting in a stormy sky.

The fifteenth of May had been set for his assassination. Cromwell knew all the secret plans of this conspiracy; he knew every member of it; and on the afternoon when Jane Swaffham saw him passing up London streets, so stern and scornful, he had just ordered the arrest of one hundred of them.

Jane heard constantly of these events, but her heart had closer interests. The ship which was to carry Cluny and herself to America was lying at the wharf nearly ready for sea. There were to be no other passengers; Cluny and Jane alone were to find in its black-ribbed cabin their home for many weeks, perhaps months. A recent experience had proven the necessity for this exclusion of strange elements. Early in June, Israel had taken Cluny to bid farewell to his old General, and the meeting had tried both men severely. At its close Cromwell went to a desk and wrote a few lines to the officials of the Massachusetts Colony; in them, commending Lord Neville to their kindness and care. His hands trembled as he wrote, strong hands—trembled as he gave the letter to Cluny. Then he kissed him once more, and with a "farewell" that was a blessing, he turned away, weeping.

"Oh, indeed, it's very well to cry, 'poor Stephen,' when he is beyond your pity. You might have pitied him when he was alive, that would have been something to the purpose. All his short, unhappy life has been one constant battle with Puritans and poverty. Oh, how I hate those Stuarts! I am thankful to see you weep for him, Jane. I think you ought. God knows he loved you well, and most thankfully. And he is the last, the last of Wick. Root and branch, the de Wick tree has perished. I wish I could die also."

"And Cynlin, Matilda?"

"I shall marry Cynlin—at the proper time."

"You may have sons and daughters."

"I hope not. I pray not. I have had sorrow enough. My father and his three sons are a good ending for the house. It was built with the sword, and it has been destroyed by the sword. No, Jane, the line of de Wick is finished. Cynlin and I will be the last Earl and Countess de Wick."

"And Prince Rupert?"

"Is a dream from which I have awakened."

"But he may still be dreaming."

"Rupert has many faults, but he is a man of honor. My marriage to Cynlin will be a barrier sacred to both of us. Our friendship can hold itself above enmities. You need not fear for Cynlin; Matilda de Wick will honor her husband, whether she obeys him or not. Cynlin is formed for power and splendor, and he will stand near the throne."

"If there be a throne."

"Of that, who now doubts? Cromwell is falling sick, and you may feel 'God save the King' in the air. If you had married Stephen, he would have been alive to join in the cry. I could weep at your obstinacy, Jane."

"Let it pass, dear. I was suckled on Puritan milk. Stephen and I never could have been one. My fate was to go to the New World. Stephen has escaped this sorrowful world and—"

"Oh, then, I would be here! This sorrowful world with Stephen in it was a better world than it is without him. Jane, Jane, how he loved you!"

"And I loved him, as a companion, friend, brother, if you will. When you lay his body in de Wick, cast a tear and a flower on his coffin for me. God give him peace!"

At length their "farewell" came. The last words between them were soft and whispered, and only those sad, loving monosyllables which are more eloquent than the most fervid protestations. And so they parted, forever in this life.

The next afternoon Jane and Cluny rode through London streets for the last time. On the ship they found Jane's father, Doctor Verity and Sir Thomas Jeverly. There were no tears at this parting; nor any signs of sorrow; every one seemed resolved to regard it as a happy and hopeful event. For, though not spoken of, there was a firm belief and promise of a meeting again in the future not very far off. Israel held his little daughter to his heart, and then laid her hand in Cluny's without a word; the charge was understood. When the last few minutes came, and the men were trooping to the anchor, Doctor Verity raised his hands, and the three or four in the dim, small cabin knelt around him, and so their farewell was a prayer and their parting a blessing.

Israel and Doctor Verity walked away together, and for a mile neither of them spoke a word. As they came near to Sandy's, however, Israel said: "It is a short farewell, John. It will be my turn next."

"I shall go when you go."

"To the Massachusetts Colony?"

"Yes. I am ready to go when the time comes."

"It is not far off."

"A few months at the longest."

"He is very ill!"

"The foundations of his life are shaken, for he lives not in his power or his fame, or even in the work set him to do. I, no, Oliver lives in his feelings. They are at the bottom of his nature; all else is superstructure. And Fairfax, as well as Lambert and others, think they can fill great Oliver's place!—no man can."

"For that very reason, when he departs, I will away from England. I have no heart for another civil war. I will draw sword under no less a general than Oliver."

"Good night, John. Have you told Martha?"

"Not yet. She will fret every day till the change comes. Why should we have a hundred frets when a dozen may do?"

But when Israel went into Martha's presence something made him change his mind. The mother had been weeping, and began to weep afresh when she saw her husband. He anticipated her sorrowful questions, and with an assumption of cheerfulness, told her how happy and hopeful Jane and Cluny seemed to be. "It did not feel like a parting at all, Martha," he said, "and indeed there was no need for any such feeling. We are going ourselves very soon now."

The words were spoken and could not be recalled, and he stood, in a moment, ready to face the storm they might raise. Martha looked at her husband with speechless wonder and distress, and he was more moved by this attitude than by her usual garrulous anger. He sat down by her side and took her hand, saying:

WENT TO DUSS INSTEAD.

Chorus Girl's Quick Wit Got Her an Engagement.

John Duss, the western Pennsylvania musical director, who came to New York two years ago to battle with prejudice and harsh critics, has had his hearing, and is not found wanting.

For his summer season Mr. Duss has secured Madison Square Garden, and such artists as Nordica, De Reszke, Campanari, Blauvelt and Scotti will assist him. A chorus of 1,000 voices will be heard in large chorus works.

For this chorus there are many applicants. A young woman tripped lightly into the presence of Mr. Duss a few weeks ago, requesting a position in the chorus.

"What experience have you had?" asked the bandmaster.

"I've sung in church choirs, in the chorus of a comic opera, and recently on the vaudeville stage, singing ragtime and coon songs," said the applicant, proudly.

"A case of from good to bad to worse, surely," remarked Duss, with some sarcasm.

"My mother said I was going to the d—," whimpered the girl, "and so I thought I'd make a change."

"Are you going to keep on going to the d—?" questioned the musician more considerably.

"Yes," if D. stands for Duss," said the girl, eagerly.

Duss engaged her.—Boston Post.

DUKE OF YORK SNUBBED.

Mounted Police Had Good Idea of Their Dignity.

Listening to the conversation of the Canadian mounted police, as one encounters them everywhere in the Northwest, it is distinctly evident that they are men of a different stripe from the Tommy Atkins of the British regulars, says Leslie's Monthly.

The mounted policeman is a head, not an automaton nor a punky. This was curiously illustrated during the visit of the duke of York to the territories last year. As the royal train came into one of the frontier towns two hired outrunners dashed breathlessly to the platform, shouting excitedly for the police to "get out the royal horses!" The troopers of the university type smiled and said nothing; but one of the frontiersmen in khaki frowned and took a bite of chewing tobacco.

The two little men in royal livery became apoplectic.

"Don't you men hear? Get out the horses! Who's going to get out the horses?"

The trooper in khaki again calmly took consolation for the insult from his tobacco. "Have some? No? Don't burst your buttons. What do you think you are for? Get 'em out yourself!"

STREET SCENES IN THE CAPITAL OF THE TURK

No City in the World Has a More Delightful Appearance from a Distance—Minarets of Stately Mosques Crown the Hills of Stambul.

(Special Correspondence.)

No city on the face of the globe has so wonderful or beautiful an entrance as that through which one approaches Constantinople from the Mediterranean. All the charms and loveliness of sky and sea, mountain forms, islands and verdure of indented coasts are gradually disclosed in this enchanting passage with an opulence and splendor of natural beauty impossible to describe.

Crossing the Aegean sea, then through the Hellespont into the sea of Marmora, this glorious panorama is out the fitting introduction to the entrancing vision of Constantinople, as it rises from the waters, rich in color rocky islands; the huge bulk of the Olympus, the softly tinted sky and sea—all are but expressions of nature at her loveliest, and form an unforgettable and soul-stirring picture.

Constantinople is so diverse in its life and its component parts—for Pera and Scutari are essentially a part of the whole—that it is difficult to know where to begin in giving any idea of the city.

The Arab—you remember him in Byron's poems—will he yell "Glour!" if his eyes fall upon you? Oh, no. He is too proud for that, even if he cared to insult you. The Jew—a veritable Shylock in dress and manner, to be ing and contours, its seven hills marked by gleaming minarets and domes, and the deep greens of its cypresses and pines and palms contrasting sharply with the varied tints of its crumbling walls and fortifications.

Caigues without number flit in and out among the huge ships of all nations that lie about the broad roadstead, warships and freighters, P. and O. steamers bound for India and the remoter east, German vessels that later will seek African ports on the east coast, corn ships from Russia, sturdy looking merchantmen from America, picturesque feluccas from Greece, and the Ionian islands, and the yachts of millionaires and princes.

It is wise, but very difficult, from sheer eagerness, to behold the wonders of Constantinople at close range, to remain upon the steamer deck for half a day to fix in the mind a comprehensive idea of the city and its environs, all of which, in their chief features, are presented to the eye as a well-defined picture, apart from the perplexities of narrow streets and byways through which the various attractions are reached.

Upon the hills of Stambul stand the great mosques, their ivory-white minarets gleaming in the sunlight of clear day, or gilded, or reddened, to columns of gold or blood in the setting glow of the sun. Long processions of cypresses and clusters of palm and Oriental shrubberies mark the streets and gardens.

St. Sophia, with four white minarets and rose-colored walls rising in successive breaks to the vast dome that surmounts the wonderful pile of masonry—but he uses a typewriter in his well-kept business house. The Turk speaks English almost as well as you do, perhaps, and, with a manner that is beautiful to see, dines you, and tells over the black coffee the wild stories of earlier days, when the Janissaries were slaughtered in the streets of Constantinople.

At Scutari you may witness the great spectacle of the departure of the pilgrims to Mecca, and here is the wonderfully beautiful cemetery—the City of the Dead—where, among the tombs and cypress groves, the living hold their holidays and picnic parties. From here one takes the train to visit the ancient Broussa, and among the little streets pass dark-eyed and often beautiful Jewesses, or Turkish ladies, richly, but rather quietly dressed, wearing the flimsiest of yashmaks, if they happen to be pretty, and rather thick ones if they are plain of face or old.

The limits of this article do not permit of any description of the thousand interesting sights and places and people with which the city allures the stranger. They are, literally, too numerous to mention.

Perhaps one of Constantinople's greatest and most fascinating attractions is the grand bazaar, called Bozestin, for here weeks and weeks of observation would not exhaust the novelties or interest of the immense display of Oriental manufactures.

In the bazaar of perfumes, one is made dizzy with the atmosphere of odorous mixtures, for here are gathered all the exquisite and delicate fragrances known to the world. The Orientals are fond of perfumes, and the rarity of some of the scents to be found here makes their price literally above that of rubies. This bazaar is much frequented by the Turkish women, and, if one cares to know how their mouths and chins and usually well-shaped noses look, this is the place to come, while their yashmaks are lifted to inhale some special perfume.

The charm of Constantinople is as insidious as the spell of hashish, and Kipling expressed its witchery in words that every traveler in the Orient understands when he wrote:

If you see the East a-calling—why, you won't 'eed nothin' else—No, you won't 'eed nothin' else but them spicy garlic smells, An' the wind among the palm-trees and the tinkly temple bells.

CREAT POWER OF MAGNETS.

Force Is Applied to Many Useful Purposes in Three Days.

One of the practical uses of a magnet, but to those immediately concerned a highly important use, is that in which it is sometimes employed to withdraw small pieces of iron from such out of the way places as the human eye. Another use of the tractive force of magnetism on a much larger scale was that to which it was put by Edison in his magnetic ore separator, in which the ore, previously crushed to a fine powder, is dropped down a chute past the poles of powerful electro-magnets, in passing which the iron particles of the ore are deflected to one side, while the nonmagnetic stone dust continues undeflected down the chute. Still another instance of the employment of magnetism in a small way is that in which a magnetized tack hammer is used in the manufacture of strawberry baskets on a large scale in conjunction with a mechanical device which presents the tacks, one at a time and head up, to the operative, thereby greatly facilitating his work.

It is a far cry from lifting a tack by means of magnetism to the lifting of massive iron and steel plates weighing four, six and twelve tons by this same force, which is now being done every workday in a number of large steel works. Electro-magnetism, of course, is utilized, the form of the magnet being usually rectangular for this work and presenting a flat surface to the plates lifted. The magnets are suspended by chains from cranes and pick up the plates by simple contact and without the loss of time consequent to the adjustment of chains and hooks in the older method. It is also found that the metal plates can be lifted by the magnets while still so hot that it would be impossible for the men to handle them.—Cassier's Magazine.

STOLE LIGHT FROM WIRES.

Hotelkeeper Thought It Cheaper Than Feeding Electrical Company.

A hotelkeeper in the City of Mexico, whose place was always brilliantly lighted by electric lamps, apparently without regard to cost, has recently been convicted by a local judge for stealing from the electric light company the current with which his hostelry was lighted. He was condemned to a year's imprisonment and a fine of $33.70, and, as an additional penalty, was "disqualified for all kinds of public honors and employment."

The landlord who attempted to evade the electric company's charges wired his house and made a connection with the company's cables, with the intention, as he pleaded, of calling at the office of the company and explaining the matter at a later day. He also declared that he had used the current for "only a month." The company had its suspicions aroused and applied to the court for authority to make an examination of the hotel lighting system, which was granted, with the result of revealing the fraud. The legal point of interest involved in the case hinged upon the definition of the word "robbery," which the district code thus elucidates: "He commits robbery who possesses himself of a movable thing belonging to another, without right and without the consent of the person entitled by law to dispose of it."

The Proper Thing.

"My name is plain John Smith," he said. "To the gracious tombstone man. 'I want to fix things when I'm dead. As only a live man can. So listen, friend, and take these down; I'd have them loom in state From my modest slab, be it gray or brown. Or of marble or common slate."

"Just say, in all my married life I never once got tight. Nor did I grieve my loving wife By staying out at night, And add these lines they're strictly true. As I expect to die."

"Unto said wife his whole life through He never told a lie."

The tombstone man drew forth his book And wrote the lines therein. And said: "I must not overlook The words that shall begin. From what you've said, 'tis my surmise (Since fibs you so abhor) You wish me to begin: Here lies John Smith, A Bachelor."

Revising Names of Indians.

Dr. Charles A. Eastman, whose admirable work on "Indian Boyhood," has met with such success, has been appointed a special agent to revise the allotment rolls of the Sioux and see that they are given permanent family names. This is in pursuance of the general plan of merging the Indians in American citizenship. It is a task requiring great patience and delicacy. Preferably the original native name will be preserved, but all vulgar nicknames and incorrect translations and anything which might mortify or make the civilized Indian appear ridiculous are to be rejected. Each Indian must be personally consulted when any change appears necessary.

Revising Names of Indians.

The diocesan convention of the Protestant Episcopal church in session at Garden City, N. Y., refused the title of "honorable" to Judge Augustus Van Wyck. The judge's name headed the lay committee and when a clerk read it one of the delegates suggested that "honorable" should be prefixed, as Mr. Van Wyck had been a justice of the supreme court. Another delegate protested vigorously, saying that no lay titles, either earned or otherwise, should be recognized by the convention. On a vote this view prevailed 62 to 54.

Clean and Dirty Milk.

From the Farmers' Review: Many dairymen apparently fail to recognize the fact that when milking and caring for milk they are handling human food and that it should be treated as such. In many dairies the milk goes to his task with soiled hands and dust-laden clothing and without so much as brushing the loose dust and dirt from the cow. Under such conditions much milk must of necessity find its way into the milk. No other food is produced in such filthy surroundings as is frequently the case with milk and no other food will absorb odors so readily and become tainted so quickly as will milk. It is, therefore, doubly important that great care be exercised to have milk produced under the most sanitary conditions possible. One can judge something of the amount of filth in milk by the sediment found at the bottom, but only a small part of the contamination is in visible form. Milk sours because of the presence of certain kinds of bacteria, which, acting upon the sugar of the milk, change it into lactic acid. Other organisms cause different changes, some offensive to taste and smell and a few dangerous to health. These bacteria are living organisms, though so extremely minute that 250 of them placed side by side are equal only to the thickness of ordinary writing paper. While thorough straining will remove all visible filth the greater part of it is in solution which, of course, will pass through even the best of strainers. Milk in the udder of a healthy cow is both pure and sterile, and if it could be drawn and handled without contamination would remain sweet and wholesome for an indefinite length of time. However, bacteria accumulate and multiply in such places as mud holes, manure heaps, seams of utensils not thoroughly cleansed, or where animal or vegetable matter not living is exposed to warmth and moisture. They are present in dirt and dust of every description, and because of their great numbers and their wide diffusion no practical method has yet been devised by which milk may be drawn absolutely free from contamination with living germs. Yet they are unnecessarily numerous in milk as ordinarily drawn, because it contains a thousand times more bacteria than that which may be obtained by using extreme care in regard to cleanliness. Hence the necessity for keeping everything about a dairy scrupulously clean, particularly in hot weather when conditions are especially favorable to bacterial growth. Clean milk will not only remain sweet longer, but as everyone knows is a more wholesome food. If it were more fully realized that milk is a food and not simply a commercial commodity it would seem that dairymen would not allow so much filth to get into it.—W. J. Fraser, University of Illinois.

Intelligence in Dairying.

In an address to dairymen C. E. Marshall of Michigan said: "The producers of milk in this country are not sufficiently acquainted with milk itself and with those which tend to influence milk, and therefore, are not intelligent in those methods which will produce satisfactory milk. Also, they are claiming that the consumers pay for the extra labor on the production of a first grade. Farther, too, there is too little comprehensive knowledge of the used in the manufacture of milk products. You may claim me in these remarks, but in an right in saying that they know that every farm produces milk at a profit. That one farmer will make per cent on his investment in neighbor, living practically same conditions, will lose even more. What is the one is an intelligent dairymen, the other is not. One is an the other is not. No man you go or what professional ine, this same condition is the man who knows, energy to push his knowledge believe that he who is dairymen from A to Z will who will succeed in dairymen be depended upon to appreciate the value of the tion of such to his work. lieve that it is worth while educate a man who is education, whether it is self study. The best bally horse is to get it is too valuable to spend correct him."

Cost of a Pound.

One who has followed feeding experiments expressed with the amount of feed to produce a pound of beef. Frederick B. Mumford, this somewhat careful have found that the number of grain required to produce of gain at the different stages varied from two pounds to pounds. Even when the same ration is used the variations amount of grain required to produce a pound of gain are very great. In one experiment at the Missouri experiment station, where corn was the principal grain ration, three pounds of corn were sufficient to produce one pound of gain, while at the Kansas station, where corn was the principal grain ration, it required fourteen pounds of corn to produce one pound of gain. Now, if the profit is largely dependent upon the amount of grain required to produce a pound of beef, then a knowledge of the conditions which make it possible to produce a pound of beef with one-half the quantity of grain will be of the greatest possible assistance in determining upon the methods employed in profitable cattle feeding.
